

Duplicative lab requisitions

Requisitions for the same test submitted by two or more providers are now being merged by Alberta Precision Labs, whenever possible.

Effective Monday, July 22, separate specimens will not be collected for requisitions that seek the same tests. Instead, labs will only collect enough blood for one test and the results will be sent to all the providers who ordered the test. It is hoped this may result in shorter wait times.

Community providers will be listed as an authorizing provider or coordination of care recipient on result documents – meaning there is more than one provider ordering the tests. All ordering providers remain clinically responsible and will receive a call about critical test results.

Dermatology tele-advice

Specialist Link's dermatology tele-advice is temporarily unavailable.

The advice line, which offers advice on non-urgent, semi-urgent and urgent dermatological conditions, will resume normal service on Tuesday, August 6.

In the meantime, urgent requests should be directed to RAAPID. Non-urgent requests can be directed to community dermatologists. You can also submit an eConsult request.

eReferral changes

Netcare eReferral has been updated to enhance functionality for users. New features include:

- Name changes: Advice requests are now known as eConsults, while consult requests are called referrals
- FAST: Referrals can be sent to the Facilitated Access to Specialized Treatment program using a simplified search function
- User guides: Updated guides are available via the eReferral Learning Centre
- Connect Care: Access to Netcare has been enhanced. More information.
